FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY AT 31 JUL 2018

Our bond investments have benefitted the portfolio significantly this month with bond yields strengthening from 8.83% down to 8.55% at month-end. The rally has given a significant boost to the portfolio over the period. We have taken the opportunity to sell some of the bonds that we bought at higher yields, effectively locking in profits for the portfolio and also reducing duration exposure.

Strengthening bond yields have made bonds an attractive asset class for the month, with a return of 2.67% on your fund which is slightly ahead of the benchmark return.

We continue to have a positive stance towards this asset class.

MARKET COMMENTARY

We often state that bonds are mean reverting, which means that what you might lose in one month will almost certainly be made back in subsequent periods. This is particularly true for bonds that are nearing their maturity date as their value is anchored around the final amount that you will receive at redemption of the bond. This is one of the reasons that fixed income funds are considered lower-risk investments. It is also one of the main reasons that we have constructed a portfolio of nominal bonds, half of which will be redeemed within the next nine years. We think that interest rates in South Africa are too high and that rates should come down further over time. However, if we are wrong the portfolio will be defensive because the bonds will recover any lost ground quite quickly.

In the same vein, we note that South African June inflation numbers (reported during July) were below market expectations for the month. In fact, this is a trend that has developed where the last five inflation prints have all been below market consensus estimates. This is indicative to us of a slow economy, where companies are absorbing inflationary pressures because consumers cannot fully afford them. We note that wage negotiation settlements are still on the high side, whilst oil prices and fuel levies are pushing up the price of petrol (it is hard to believe that the rand is now stronger than it was 1 year ago!). These really are the only inflationary pressures that we are seeing currently and, in our view, the SA Reserve Bank (SARB) should cut rates, although we believe that this will almost certainly not occur during 2018.

We continue to like bonds as an asset class and, whilst we took profits on the recovery that has occurred since the extreme foreign selling a month-and-a-half ago, we will certainly include a larger exposure to shorter maturity bonds in your portfolio mix.
